

Don't Get Comfortable! UC Berkeley's Executive Leadership Program is Designed to Challenge You

After gathering feedback from hundreds of executives, UC Berkeley's Center for Executive Education has updated "The Berkeley Executive Leadership Program." The new program is for highly experienced leaders who are eager to work hard to answer a simple question:

"What can I do differently, as a leader, to bring my organization to its full potential?"

Who it's for: We focus on leaders who redefine how we do business—innovative leaders who are willing to face uncomfortable truths, and to try new things, reflective of the Haas School of Business mission.

What we do: We solicit unfiltered, explicit feedback on your company culture, and your leadership style—so you see yourself and the organization you have built through the eyes of others. We ask you to work on your most difficult personal and organizational challenges. We take you off balance through awkward social exercises.

How it helps you: We help you develop the self-awareness, skills and insights to unlock innovation and growth, create energy and urgency, and drive results. You leave with practical, useful tools that can be put to use immediately in your organizations.

The Berkeley Executive Leadership Program draws on the vast resources of the Haas School of Business and the exciting business environment of the Silicon Valley and San Francisco Bay Areas. We bring together professionals of diverse backgrounds, perspectives, and experiences in the pursuit of professional and organizational success.

About Us:

The Center for Executive Education's mission is to develop, innovate and sustain programs designed to help professionals develop the skills, knowledge, and mindset to embrace change and to use it as a catalyst to success.

<http://executive.berkeley.edu/programs/executive-leadership-program/>

Contact: Kim Fisher, co-Director and co-Creator of the UC Berkeley Executive Leadership program, +1-415-637-4913, fisher@haas.berkeley.edu